OVERVIEW

Overview Sheet for Greater Columbia ACH

The Greater Columbia ACH is a collaboration of community leaders from a variety of sectors with a common interest in improving health. Accountable Communities of Health (ACHs) are an essential component of Washington's Health Innovation Plan, known as "Healthier Washington," which aims to transform the health system in the state to bring better health, better care and lower costs to Washington residents. Greater Columbia ACH includes 10 counties and the Yakama Nation.

Mission: The mission of the Greater Columbia Accountable Community of Health is to advance the health of our population by decreasing health disparities, improving efficiency of health care delivery, and empowering individuals and communities through collaboration, innovation, and community engagement.

The GCACH Board represents over 17 sectors within our geographic region. With support from the state, they are voluntarily organizing to coordinate activities, jointly implement health-related projects, and advise state agencies on how to best address health needs within their area. They are not intended to duplicate or replace existing services.

Organization Chart

The GCACH has identified five health priorities within our regional service area: Care Coordination, Diabetes/ Obesity, Behavioral health, Healthy Youth & Equitable Communities, and Oral Health, and has formed working groups around each priority.

Each group is analyzing data, sharing information, and assessing existing programs and gaps within the region in order to prioritize critical needs. Community-based, cross-sector coalitions are an effective and efficient way to address complex problems. Called "Collective Impact," this model of problem solving allows an issue to be viewed through the lens of a variety of knowledgeable people with a shared agenda who coordinate their collective efforts. Essential to the model is tracking progress, making continuous improvement, and having the support of a backbone agency.

If you or your organization has any responsibility for the health of your community, consider becoming involved in an ACH. ACH's represent a formal opportunity to achieve results you will not get working alone. They do this by connecting those with similar concerns and goals, allowing them to share information and coordinate activities.
